

The Uncooperative Flying Carpet

By Michele Clark McConnochie

Finding Fun Facts

“It wasn’t exactly a surprise to see our old friend, Clyde. We had started our strange journey in his field, after all. But it was a great surprise to see that a unicorn’s horn had sprouted from his forehead. The horn gleamed in the sunshine, reflecting sparkling rainbows of pastel colors. He neighed again and shook his head, then muscled in among us and began to drink deeply.”

Most unicorns are white and dainty. Clyde is a very large Clydesdale horse who suffers from gas.

- 🦄 Research Clydesdale horses and make a fact file, poster or leaflet to display what you have learned. Remember to include headings and sub-headings, bullet points and pictures. You can use this space to plan your fact file, poster or leaflet here.